Script: "First, let's keep it simple. AI is just software that can understand text, images, or data, and help you do tasks faster. Think of it as a smart assistant that can write, design, analyze, or even code. You don't need to learn how to build AI—you only need to learn how to use existing AI tools."

[2:01 – 3:30] Step 2: Find Beginner-Friendly AI Tools

For design: Canva's AI features.

For video: tools like Pictory or Runway. All of these have free plans, so you can test them without spending a dime."

Freelancing: Offer blog writing, graphic design, or social media posts created with AI.

Content creation: Start a YouTube or TikTok channel and use AI to script and edit faster.

Microservices: Sell AI-generated logos, eBooks, or resumes on Fiverr.

Automation: Use AI to handle repetitive tasks like email writing or data cleanup for small businesses."

On Gumroad, creators sell AI-assisted eBooks or templates that keep generating passive income. These aren't just theories—people are already doing it."

[6:31 – 7:30] Step 5: Tips to Scale and Avoid Mistakes

Don't rely on raw AI output. Always edit for quality.
